The Administration

Never before has the enrollment at Indiana State equaled that of the past year. Yet, despite classes full to overflowing, many additional hours of teaching, long hours of new related work, these men and women who make up the firm foundation of Indiana State have remained on the job, sacrificing their time and energy in a constant effort to bring to the student his share of our rich educational heritage. Through their continued cooperation and effort the college will journey successfully along the road of progress.

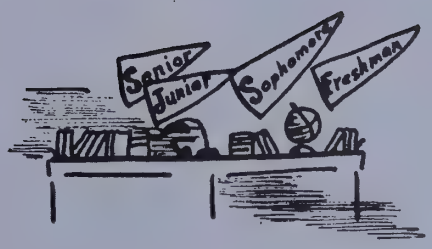
The Classes . . . .



There is an old saying which goes

You can tell a Freshman by his stare,
You can tell a Sophomore by his hair,
You can tell a Junior by his touch,
You can tell a Senior but you can't tell him much, but with the return of the veteran to the campus there would be difficulty in applying any line of the adage. All classes, whether it be the bewildered Freshmen or gray-haired Seniors, are a vital part of a unity which molds a college and its spirit. Through their work together and as separate units they bring a feeling of progress, one of the greatest satisfactions of education.

SENIORS TRY THEIR CAPS AND GOWNS FOR SIZE THEN SEND THEM BACK AND LOOK TOWARD NEW HORIZONS

The class of '47 . . last lap of academic career . . studies resumed after an interlude serving in the armed forces . . combining college and family life . . a prominent class . . many remarkable personalities . . accomplishments in varied fields . . dramatics . . art . . debate . . science . . journalism . . class day exercises, February . . Book and Torch ceremony . . President's reception . . commencement exercises . . the beginning and the end . . the end of pleasant and joyous college days . . the beginning of responsibilities and struggle for careers . . endeavoring for full realization of ambitions . . striving to put ideals into practice . . pursuing the chosen field fitted by four years of preparation . . and will no doubt live up to Indiana State's standard of providing other colleges with eminent presidents.

These hard-working seniors take time off from intensive study for an afternoon session to "discuss" things . . here, B.M.O.C.'s Tex Graham, Bill Bitzgaio, and Don Hubert appreciate Bob Lightcap's mavoureeny story.

After four years seniors still read the INDIANA STATESMAN to find out the doings on the campus. Roz Gheaja, Joyce Thomas, George Johnston, Mabel Finley, and Bob Van Arsdall laugh and reminisce about other STATESMAN in years gone by.

Mary Manning, Lee Hinman, and Martha Trout caught in the Lobby, waiting . . . . waiting for Chestnut!

THEY GIVE OUT WITH THE ENTERTAINMENT AND BEAUTY

Whenever Rudy Render "gives" at the piano, you are always certain to find a crowd . . and appreciative audience of Libby Back, "Soapy" Holmes, Fred Bonewell, and Carolyn Haste gather to plaudit Rudy's mellow interpretatiins.

Taking time out from Junior Prom duties, Mary Lou Steed, orchestra chairman, Marguarite Chestnut, publicity chairman, and Pat Phillips, program chairman, pose for the camera. Quizzed upon refusals to smile, the only answer received was "We're saving them for the Junior Prom."

Del Jones and Sally Campbell taking advantage of grill facilites to partake of the "pause that refreshes" during that afternoon lag. Don Marshall, stops to "hello." Don't get worried, fellows, Mrs. Marshall is there at the right.

The Organizations

The qualities of cooperation and leadership so necessary to all of a student's life are nowhere developed as within the organizations on a college campus. From a student's close contact with the members of his respective groups grows a sense of value and a basis of evaluation of his fellow man. Through this contact are recognized and nourished talents and latent abilities, helping them to grow and the student grows. By continued service to the student body and the college they have more than proved their worth.
